A Guide to Travel and Travel Insurance

This guide was written by a NHS MPN specialist nurse, with input from consultant haematologists, specialist nurses, psychologists and volunteers of the MPN Voice charity.

Travel Advice

- Inform your consultant haematologist that you plan to travel and ensure that you are fit to fly, especially if you are taking a long haul flight, your consultant haematologist will be able to advise you on precautions to take with regards to DVTs (deep vein thrombosis)
- Check with the practice nurse in your local GP surgery to see if you need any vaccinations prior to travel. Some vaccinations are not suitable for people on certain MPN medications or with particular conditions, you may need advice from your GP or your consultant haematologist
- Have a list of all your current medications with you at all times and make sure you have enough supply before your travels and take them in your hand luggage. Plan ahead to allow time to fill your prescriptions
- Check before you travel with each airline and country that you plan to visit if they have any restrictions on carrying medications on the flight and on entering a country, (particularly if you use liquid medications and syringes), if so obtain a letter from your consultant haematologist stating they are necessary for your health and that you may need to use them during your flight and that they must be carried in hand luggage
- If you are travelling with liquid medicines or needles/syringes check with the airlines and airports you will be using regarding the carrying of any liquids during your flight, it should be noted that all airlines now restrict the carrying of liquids and have certain criteria you must follow, you may have to obtain a letter from your consultant haematologist stating that you have to carry your medication with you for use during a flight and that there is a risk of freezing if it is placed in the hold luggage
- Pack any injections/syringes in suitable containers to avoid bending needles during travel, you should also consider carrying a sharps bin for the disposal of injections/syringes

- Inform the airline if you need disability aids and help in the airport and on the flight
- Be alert to the need to stay hydrated on flights and when travelling to sunny climates, drink plenty of water while travelling to prevent dehydration
- Obtain a medical tag/bracelet if you feel it may be necessary to identify your illness clearly in case of accident or unexpected illness
- Ensure you have the necessary equipment you may need whilst on holiday e.g. oxygen or inhalers, ensure you have enough supply for your holiday, and check with each airline and airport you use regarding the carrying and use of oxygen, pumps and inhalers
- Protect yourself from the sun, use high factor sun cream and wear a hat
- When you arrive at your destination check where the local medical centre and hospital is in case you need to use them, make a note of their telephone numbers

TRAVEL INSURANCE AND EUROPEAN HEALTH INSURANCE CARD (EHIC)

It is advisable to obtain an European Health Insurance Card (EHIC) which is free of charge and enables you to access state provided healthcare in European Economic Area (EEA) countries, including Switzerland, at a reduced cost or sometimes for free. It will cover your treatment until you return to the UK. It also will cover treatment for pre-existing medical conditions and routine maternity care. An EHIC is not an alternative to travel insurance, you are advised to take out adequate travel insurance for any journey you take.

For more information on what is covered in each country, and to apply for an EHIC, visit the NHS Choices website at:

<http://www.nhs.uk/NHSEngland/Healthcareabroad/EHIC/Pages/about-the-ehic.aspx>

or you can apply by telephone 0300 330 1350.

Be aware of unofficial websites which may charge you for providing their services in obtaining a card on your behalf, remember, this is a free service.

Why have travel insurance?

It is very important to seriously consider obtaining travel insurance in case you become ill or have an accident while on holiday to provide medical expenses cover while you are outside the UK and/or need to be flown back to the UK in an emergency.

How to obtain insurance, what to consider?

Insurance companies assess all applications individually, for this reason when applying for cover it is always advisable to provide as much detail as possible about your MPN and any other medical conditions you have, if necessary you can ask your consultant haematologist to write a letter stating your current diagnosis, related problems and medication.

Many insurance companies are reluctant to insure patients who already have an illness and they may ask you to take a 'related exclusion'*, it is probably advisable not to accept this offer.

Related exclusion – some insurers will agree to cover but may exclude cover for a claim related to your condition*

Insurance Companies

A number of patients have found the following companies helpful, though of course in each case the applicant will be individually assessed and we would recommend that you contact more than one company.
